Japan International Food for Zero Hunger

At the UNESCO Lecture by Ms.Asano, the second and third graders learned about hunger and exchanged views about hunger around the world.

Student' s Impression

- I felt the importance of actually taking action. I have respect for Ms, Asano.
- After listening to this lecture, I felt that it was not something that could be done easily, but that I would like to provide support that takes into consideration the feelings of the recipient.
- I didn't think that the supplies we gave as gifts would hurt the dignity of the other people because they would be perceived as something “unnecessary” sent from us.
